MEAL ARRANGEMENT

- Tanzania offers a surprising variety of naturally vegan foods influenced by African, Indian and Swahili cuisines. Throughout the journey, guests can expect fresh tropical fruits, rice dishes, chapati, vegetable curries, beans, lentils, coconut-based stews, grilled vegetables, soups, salads and local specialties made from cassava, sweet potatoes and plantains.
- As with all Ubuntu Vegan Travel experiences, every effort will be made to provide delicious and nourishing vegan meals throughout the trip.
- A dedicated cook will accompany the group during our stay in the Serengeti, preparing fresh, hot vegan meals at the campsite each day. This allows us to enjoy nourishing home-style food in the heart of the African wilderness while catering to our dietary preferences.
- Please let us know in advance if you have any food allergies.

VEGAN TANZANIAN FOOD

Maharage ya Nazi

Slow-cooked beans are simmered in a rich coconut and tomato sauce, creating a hearty and satisfying meal that pairs perfectly with rice or chapati.

Wali wa Nazi

A fragrant Swahili rice dish cooked in creamy coconut milk, often served with vegetable curries, beans, or stews. Simple, comforting, and packed with flavour.

Ugali with Vegetable Stew

Ugali, Tanzania's national staple, is a firm maize porridge similar to polenta. It is traditionally eaten with stewed vegetables, beans, or leafy greens.

Mchicha

A nutritious spinach-like leafy green sautéed with onions, tomatoes, and spices. Found across Tanzania, it is often served alongside rice, ugali, or beans and is a staple of local home cooking.

Ndizi za Nazi

A traditional East African dish made with ripe or semi-ripe plantains cooked in a mildly spiced coconut sauce
